Durkheim also argued that our primary categories for understanding the world have their origins in religion. It is religion, Durkheim writes, that gave rise to most if not all other social constructs, including the larger society. Durkheim argued that categories are produced by the society, and thus are collective creations.

Durkheim's body of work as a researcher and theorist focused on how it is that a society can form and function, which is another way of saying, how it can maintain order and stability (see his books titled The Division of Labor in Society and The Elementary Forms of Religious Life). For this reason, he is considered the creator of the functionalist perspective within sociology.
